HER MAJESTY CHRISTINE. I am seventy, gray and staid;
I fove welf a little maid,
And she rates me like a queen.
She bas such a royal way.
Whatsoever she may say,
I am eager to obey
Her small Majesty Christine.

She has robes of wondrous white, she has sushes gay and bright, Lace and ribbon for a queen; Golden crown is not so ful? As her crown of golden hate. Ab, what malden can compare With her Majesty Christine!

She's exactly five years old;
Promptly still obeys mamma,
But no one has ever seen
Such a shave to any queen
As I am to sweet Christine Vhen she calts me grandpapa.

COMETS. Frof. Proctor's Views About Comets and Tack Peculiarities.

During the last two years many comets, some of them bright ones, have been comets than been precised devaluation of proper or inherent light in the comets than we did two years ago? I wish that I could honestly answer, We know a great deal more; but I cannot. Still, something has been calculated any whereafter we want of the proper of the company of Still, something has been added to our knowledge, and, unless I mistake, although that something may in itself be slight, the manner in which it has been learned is such that the small modicum of new truth is full of promise. I suppose every one who reads these lines knows pretty well what are now the chief difficulties in cometic science. We want to know why, as the comet approaches the sun, it throws out all around it, but chiefly toward the sun, the luminons appendage we call the coma or hair-really, so far as we can judge, a nebulous or gaseous envelope. We want next to know why the matter thus thrown out seems to become subject to a repulsive force by which it is strongly driven from the sun to form what is called the comet's tail. We want to know how much of the light of the comet's nucleus (or brightest part,) coma or nebulous surrounding, and tail is due to the mere reflection of sunlight and how much is inherent. Also, having ascertained beyond all possibility of doubt or cavil that part of the light, in all three cases is inherent, we want to know how sufficient heat is acquired to raise uncleus, coma and tail to actual inher-
